Activity Spotlight

Trish MacLachlan has been drawn to watercolour for close to fifteen years, ever since she decided to give the medium more of her time and attention. She paints in a traditional, impressionist style, simplifying a scene down to its essence, and loves everything watercolour does best: its freshness, transparency, spontaneity, and the occasional surprise once the darks go in.

Trish currently teaches a watercolour class at the Royal Art Society of New South Wales, where she exhibits as an Associate Member, and has led a number of workshops for artists at every stage. Her results speak for themselves: wins at the Oatley 101 Members' Exhibition in 2023 and 2025, honours at the Combined Art Societies of Sydney, the Drummoyne Art Award and the Camden Art Prize, and a Combined Art Societies win back in 2017.
